SOIL ♦ It Can Make or Break Your Garden

Soil is the foundation of every garden. It is the single most important ingredient of the garden 'pie'. If you don't get it right-not much else you do will make a difference.

Learn the do's and don'ts of soil management to ensure you will always have a beautiful garden!

Jennifer White is passionate about teaching people how to be thoughtful stewards of the environment and to responsibly manage our natural resources. She will discuss the basics of soil composition and structure, practical methods to identify your garden soil types, the possibilities and limitations of soil modification, and how to manage your expectations of your garden based on your soil type. We will have fun in the process! Please come ready to get your hands a little dirty and truly "dig" into and get excited about the wonders of soil!

Jennifer has over 12 years of professional experience in Natural Resource Management and Environmental Education. She was previously employed by Portage Soil & Water Conservation District and The Ohio State University Extension.

She has a BS degree in both Environmental Studies and Biology from Ohio Northern University. Jennifer is an avid gardener and graduated from the Ohio Master Gardener Volunteer program in 2000.

She currently is a member of the Stark County OSU Extension Advisory Board and is a Stark County 4-H Volunteer.
